FIELD PHOTOGRAPHY TIP NO. 1

SPONSORED BY

SWAROVSKI OPTIK

Taking a presentable photograph of your bear trophy is one of the most difficult shots to achieve, but with a little determination and planning you will end up with a photograph you will be proud to share. The photograph above submitted by Douglas J. Roffers of the grizzly bear (24-9/16 points) he harvested near Shaktoolik River in Alaska is an excellent example of a high-quality field photograph. Following are a few key points to remember the next time you're in the field:

- Bears generally photograph better belly down with their legs to the front and back, not on their sides. Do not stand over the bear. Get your camera down to its level for the best shot.
- We frequently receive field photographs of bears that are hanging or with the hunter sitting on the animal. Neither of these shots are flattering to the bear or the hunter.
- Remove any visible blood on or around the animal.
- Make sure the tongue is not visible and the mouth is closed.
