FIELD PHOTOGRAPHY TIP NO. 5

Black Smoke, The Closer, Auto 5, The Heater, WMD, Hog Leg—giving nicknames to our favorite hunting instrument dates back to before Fess Parker's, Davy Crockett, and Ol' Betsy. But what about field photography with Ol' Reliable? Is there an appropriate way to display your trusty companion and your trophy in a field photo?

Given everything on our minds at the time, this minor detail may be why some photos show a disrespect for the animal, unsafe positioning of a firearm, barrels in front of faces, or photos that are dominated by rifles or bows instead of the hunter and his/her trophy. Truth is, your gun or bow was an important part of the hunt and the memory. Posing with them is therefore a natural. Here a few suggestions.

Safety is always job one. Double check to make sure your firearm is unloaded and pointed in a safe direction for photo taking. In days gone by, putting a rifle between the antlers of a trophy must have been considered a yardstick of accomplishment. These poses seem to have fallen by the wayside in recent times. Laying your gun or bow on the animal is certainly more appealing, but simply holding your rifle or bow behind the animal tends to make for the best composed, safest, and most tasteful field photos. If you chose this, be sure your weapon is at your side making you and your trophy the focal points of the photograph.

David J. Gerland took this barren ground caribou, scoring 377-48 points, while hunting near Echooka River, Alaska, in 2010.

RECENTLY ACCEPTED TROPHIES

BISON ABOVE This bison was harvested in Teton County, Wyoming, during the 2009 season by Andrea Dominick, and scores 116-2/8 points.

DALL'S SHEEP BELOW M. Blake Patton took this Dall's sheep in 2010 near Keele River, Northwest Territory, with a score of 167-5/8 points.
