Genesis of a Scoring and Record System

What good is a score? Is it bragging rights? A path to backslaps, free hunts, and a book deal? The answer is none of the above.

B&C AUDIO ADVENTURE

Listen to legendary hunts from the Boone and Crockett Club archives. Download them to your phone as a podcast or listen from the website.

Terrified!

A bowhunt for black bear in 1982 nearly spells the end as the wounded bear tracks down its assailant.

Lady's Day in the High Country

At 63 years old, a Montana hunter had applied for 18 years to hunt bighorn sheep. When she finally drew the tag, she had one chance to make her dream come true.

Quest for the Giant Moose

At 12 years old, this hunter hit the Idaho mountains, hoping to fill a moose tag. The only problem was that her dad likes to hunt the steepest, rockiest, and roughest mountains he can find.

FEATURE STORIES

Record-book Shiras' Moose Found Floating in Idaho

boone-crockett.org/record-book-shiras-moose-found-floating-idaho

After a pair of moose lock their antlers and fight to the death in Idaho, a hunter and his daughter attempt to recover the racks and have a day they will never forget. Oh, and one of the bulls is the fourth largest recorded for Idaho and number 16 of All-time.

Young hunters are the future of conservation. Any time that we spend with them afield is a reason to celebrate. And sometimes, they bring home some serious antlers. Check out these record-book racks held by youth 16 and under.

MEMBER SPOTLIGHTS

Russell Train

As a tax lawyer turned conservation warrior, Russell Train had the ear of numerous U.S. presidents in the 1960s and '70s. As a result, his legacy lives on in the legislation he helped drive to the finish line.

Fred Bear

Fred "Papa" Bear's innovations in bowhunting gear and marketing vaulted the pastime into the mainstream. What is seldom discussed is his passion for conservation and his quest to establish a tax (for conservation) on the very products he sold.

ADVENTURES FROM THE ARCHIVES

Ben Lilly's Louisiana Black Bear

boone-crockett.org/adventures-archives-ben-lillys-black-bear

For over a century, Ben Lilly's Louisiana black bear has remained the state record, but it hardly compares to the stories behind the Lilly legend.

Grancel Fitz's Alaska Brown Bear

boone-crockett.org/adventures-archives-grancel-fitzs-alaska-brown-bear

Armed with a .30-06 that he took on every hunt in North America, Grancel Fitz was on a quest to find the biggest Alaska brown bear that Kodiak, Alaska, had to offer. Even though Fitz was never a regular member of the Club, his contributions to refining the Club's scoring system produced serious hunting karma because this bear was an absolute monster.

STATE RECORD CALL OUTS

boone-crockett.org/tags/boone-and-crockett-clubs-state-big-game-records

Arizona

Arizona is home to a number of desert-dwelling, record-book entries—from pronghorn to desert sheep to Coues' deer and even a century-old jaguar. This is Grand Canyon country in the north and to the south, you find yourself in true organ pipe cactus territory.

Washington

Stalk Roosevelt's elk in the rainforest or chase Rocky Mountain elk in the east—it's up to you. Washington State is a sportsman's paradise with trophy-book bighorns, mule deer, cougars, and plenty more. See what species are breaking records with our online state record database.

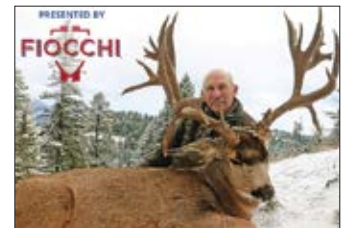

MORE TO THE SCORE

A Dozen Spine-tingling Record-book Trophies

boone-crockett.org/more-score-volume-9

Do you appreciate really big elk? Nasty non-typical mule deer your thing? Maybe you're more a fan of sheep—Dall's, desert, Stone's? Honestly, it doesn't matter because we have a little bit of everything in this line-up from our most recent record-book entries.

VINTAGE HUNTING ALBUM

The Rifles They Carried

boone-crockett.org/vintage-hunting-gallery-volume-9

The guns that hunters carry tell a story. In these vintage photos, these men and women pose not just with their winter's meat but also with the tool that helped bring home the bacon. Enjoy this trip down memory lane.

WILDLIFE CAUGHT ON CAMERA

Big Deer and Even Bigger Bears

boone-crockett.org/wildlife-caught-camera-volume-9

Put your boots on because it's time to head over to Montana's Rocky Mountain Front. On the Club's Theodore Roosevelt Memorial Ranch, we're a tad voyeuristic regarding wildlife there. From elk to mule deer and badgers to bears, there are plenty of claws, teeth, antlers, and horns to catch on camera.
